

TOOELE COUNTY CALL LIST

26 verified no-website businesses. Re-verified 2026-08-08 (every lead re-checked; three cut for having websites: Black Cat Barber, Scotty's Heating, K2 HVAC). Call sheets follow, one per page, in call order.

You can start calling now. Every sheet uses the build-it-after script: offer a free demo on the call, we build sites only for the ones who want to see it, then you text the link and close at $149 setup plus $99 a month. Openers say "I couldn't find a website for you," which is verified true. If an owner says they have one: "must have missed it, where's it at?" Numbers matched current listings but were not test dialed.

The close: $99 a month, cancel anytime, no charge to look at the demo. Every business has a full call sheet on the following pages with the opener, what to say to each objection, their review quotes, and their hours.

THE OFFER: WHY WE'RE DIFFERENT

There are a lot of people selling "$0 down websites." This is what makes ours not even the same product. Brian and Marty should know this list cold.

What every client gets (rattle these off on the phone)

1. The site already exists before we ever call. Built from their real Google reviews, their real photos, their real hours. Everyone else sells a promise. We text a finished link.
2. English AND Spanish. Two full versions of the site. Nobody doing cheap local sites offers this, and in Tooele it matters for real customers.
3. A short intro video on the site. A few seconds of motion at the top makes a $99 site look like a $5,000 site. No competitor at this price has video.
4. Google Business listing tune-up. Hours, photos, description, website link all squared away. Agencies charge hundreds for this alone. We fold it in.
5. A review card for the counter. Printed card with a QR code straight to their Google review page. More reviews means more customers, and they think of us every time one comes in.
6. Text-message service. Want something changed? Text us, done within a day. No ticket systems, no logins, no "portal."
7. Local and in person. We live here. If an owner wants to see it face to face, one of us walks in with a phone. No agency does that in Tooele.
8. No contract, and a real guarantee. Cancel by text. If the site is ever down more than a day, that month is free.

What the money covers

$149 one-time setup: their own dot-com domain, the Google listing work, the Spanish version, the intro video, the review card. Companies charge $500 to $2,500 for this bundle. We charge $149 because the monthly relationship is the business, not the up-front payday.

$99 a month: hosting, keeping it live and secure, unlimited small edits by text, and a once-a-month plain-English note on how the site is doing.

The one-liner versions

- "Everyone else will quote you a project. I already built it."
- "It's in English and Spanish. Ask anyone else what that costs."
- "Your site will have video on it. Go look at any other shop's site in town."
- "I'm not an 800 number. You'll see me at the gas station."

Later, once there are paying clients (don't pitch these yet)

- A Tooele business directory site that links every client site together
- Before-and-after Google search screenshots as case studies
- Social posts cut from their reviews and photos, monthly, as an upsell
- Price moves to $199 setup and $149 a month for new clients once there are five live sites to point at. Founding clients keep their rate forever, and they should be told that. It makes early yeses feel smart.

PRICE POINT: WHY $99 A MONTH IS RIGHT

Researched 2026-08-08. Every number below came from published pricing pages.

The short answer

$99 a month, free build, no contract. That's the answer. It sits dead center of what real companies charge for this exact model, and it's easy to defend on the phone with one sentence: "one job from the site covers three months."

What web design companies charge (one-time builds)

- Utah agencies: $1,000 to $2,500 for a small site, $2,500 to $7,500 typical
- Published Utah examples: PageForge $1,500-$2,500, Utah Website Design $2,500-$4,000, Spigot Design $5,000-$10,000
- Salt Lake agencies run $1,500 to $10,000 and up
- And after the build they still charge $50 to $200 a month for maintenance
- Utah maintenance-only plans are published at $75 to $99 a month, with no build included

What this means on the phone: we charge less per month than agencies charge just to babysit a site the owner already paid thousands for.

Freelancers

- $500 to $5,000 one-time for a small business site, $1,000 to $4,000 typical for 5 pages
- Hourly rates $50 to $100

The pay-monthly companies (our exact model: $0 down)

- Redefine Web: $99/mo for their base plan, hosting and edits included
- GoHighLevel resellers: $99/mo with a free build for local service businesses
- Hello Web Designs: from $150/mo, custom coded
- Jottful: from $65/mo plus a build fee up front
- RateGather: $33/mo at the bottom of the market, template work
- The going rate for a real, edits-included, $0-down offer is $99 to $150 a month

DIY builders (what the owner would do alone)

- Wix $17 to $159/mo, Squarespace from $19/mo, GoDaddy $10 to $21/mo
- Cheaper on paper, but the owner does everything: design, writing, photos, updates, fixing it when it breaks. What we sell is "you never touch it."

The math that closes trades

- Average plumbing job: about $315 (bigger repairs $500 to $800)
- Average HVAC repair: about $350
- Average auto repair order: $500 to $749
- Average electrician ticket: $348 to $419

One average job pays for 3 to 6 months of the site. Say it exactly like that.

The setup fee

A one-time setup fee is normal in this market and $149 is on the friendly end: Jottful charges $99 to $499 up front for the build, agencies charge $1,000 and up before a site exists at all. Keep the fee justified by real deliverables (domain, Google listing work, Spanish version, intro video) so it never feels like a junk fee. It also puts cash in the closers' pockets the same week, which keeps the calls happening. Mention it at the close, never in the opener. The hook number is always "99 a month."

When to use a different number

- $79? No. Utah maintenance-only plans already cost that and include no build.

Going lower just makes it look cheap.

- $149 later. Once there are live client sites to show and extras to bundle

(Google Business profile management, review requests), $149 is defensible. Raise it for new clients only, never on existing ones.

- One-time fallback: if an owner flat refuses monthly, $500 to $1,000

one-time, they own it, no support after. Use it to save a dying call, not as the lead offer. Monthly is the business.

WHEN THE OWNER HAS QUESTIONS

Answers for Brian and Marty. Read this twice before the first call. Don't recite it word for word on the phone. Know the answers, then just talk.

BEFORE ANYBODY DIALS (do these first)

1. Pick a name. When an owner asks "what company is this?" you need an answer. Even "BM Web Services" or "Tooee Web Co" works. Decide it once, both of you use it.
2. Decide how you take payment. Easiest: a Stripe payment link set to $99/month subscription, texted right after they say yes. Venmo works for the first ones but a card on file is what makes the monthly actually show up.
3. Get Surge set up (free hosting) so demo sites can go live fast after a yes.
4. Split the list. One of you takes odd numbers, the other takes evens, or split by tier. Don't both call the same business.
5. Keep a call log. Date, business, who answered, what they said, callback time. A notebook is fine. Half this game is calling back when you said you would.

THE MONEY QUESTIONS

"How much is it?" "Nothing to build it and nothing to look at it. If you want to keep it, it's 149 one-time to get you set up proper and 99 a month after. The monthly covers hosting, any changes you want, and me keeping it running."

"What's the 149 for?" "That's the real work up front. Your own dot-com address, getting your Google listing squared away, a Spanish version of the site, and the intro video. Web companies charge 500 to 2,500 bucks for that part alone. I keep it at 149 because I'd rather have you as a monthly client than hit you with a big bill."

"What do I get for 99 a month?" "The site stays live, I handle all the tech stuff, and when you want something changed, new photos, new prices, new hours, you text me and I do it. You never touch anything."

"That's expensive." "A web design company charges two to five grand up front for less than this, plus monthly on top. My whole setup is 149. And honestly, one job from a customer who found you online covers a couple months of it." (For trades this is literally true. One plumbing call runs $150 to $400.)

"Is there a contract?" "No contract. Month to month. If you want out, text me and it's done."

"Can I just pay once and own it?" "The 99 is what keeps it hosted, updated, and working. If you'd rather pay one price and run it yourself we can talk about that, but most guys don't want to deal with it. That's the point of the monthly." (If they push hard: a one-time build is a real option. Quote $500 to $1,000 one-time, no monthly, they handle their own hosting after. Better to keep them monthly.)

"What happens if I cancel?" "The site comes down. No fees, no fight. If you bought your own domain name, that's yours and you keep it."

THE TRUST QUESTIONS

"Who is this? What company are you with?" "[Your business name]. I'm local, out here in Tooee. It's a small operation, which is why I can do it at this price."

"How did you get my number?" "Same place your customers would look. Your Google listing. It's public."

"Is this a scam?" "Fair question, you get a lot of junk calls. Here's the thing though. You don't pay me anything today. I build the site, you look at it, and only if you like it do we talk money. There's no version of this where you're out anything."

"Can I see other sites you've made?" If you have live demos: "Yeah, I'll text you a couple links with yours." If you don't yet: "I build each one custom from your actual reviews and photos, so the best example I can show you is yours. Give me a day and you'll see it."

"Let me think about it." / "Call me back." "Sure. When's good, tomorrow or the day after?" Get a specific time. Write it down. Call back exactly then. That callback is where half the closes happen.

"My nephew does websites." / "I know a guy." "That's great, and if he ever builds it, cancel on me anytime. But right now you've got nothing, and I can have you live this week."

THE TECHNICAL QUESTIONS (plain answers, don't get technical)

"I already have a Facebook page." "Facebook's good, keep it. But when somebody googles 'plumber Tooele' your Facebook page isn't what comes up. The site shows up on Google and links right to your Facebook. They work together."

"Will I show up on Google?" "The site gets you into Google results and ties into your Google business listing. It's not instant, takes a few weeks to settle in, and nobody honest can promise you the number one spot. What I can promise is that right now people literally cannot find a website for you, and after this they can." (NEVER promise rankings or "first page." That's the fastest way to a refund fight later.)

"What's the web address going to be?" "It starts on a free address so you can see it. If you keep it, we get you a real dot-com, usually about 12 bucks a year, and I set all that up."

"Can I make changes myself?" "You just text me what you want changed and I do it. Most owners like that better than logging into anything."

"Where do the photos and reviews come from?" "Your Google listing. That's what I build from. If you've got better photos on your phone, text them to me and I'll swap them in."

"Can it take bookings / orders?" "I can link it to whatever you already use, Square, Booksy, whatever. Buttons right on the site."

"Can I get an email like info@mybusiness.com?" "Once you've got your own domain, yeah, that can be set up. Let's get the site live first."

"What if the site goes down?" "That's my job. That's part of what the monthly is. You don't watch it, I do."

CALL MECHANICS FOR FIRST-TIMERS

- Gatekeeper answers (employee, spouse): "Is the owner around? What time's he usually in? What's his name?" Write it down, call back, ask for him by name.

- Voicemail: "Hey, this is [name], local out here in Tooele. Real quick, I noticed you don't have a website and that's what I do. Nothing to buy today, I just want to show you something. Call or text me at [number]." Under 20 seconds. Then try again in two days at a different hour.

- They're busy / mid-job: "When's a better time, tonight or tomorrow morning?" Specific choices get real answers.

- They get short with you: Stay friendly, get out clean. "All good, have a good one." Small town. You'll see these people at the gas station.

- Nerves: Totally normal. The first five calls are practice, start with Tier 3 numbers 24 to 29 so the misses don't cost you the best leads. By call ten it's routine.

- The whole job on the phone is one thing: get permission to text the link. Not to close the sale. The site does the selling. Get the yes, get the best text number, get off the phone.
